The Iris

اق

Go then, sweet flower, to worlds beyond
The gardens wherein you gently grew;
From tender maiden hearts, whose fond
Care and affection go with you.

Within your petals, faces fair
Perchance will gladden those who see,
Perchance in after years their smiles
Will bring old longings back to me.

From out your purple Iris heart

There runs a song, forever sweet,
The ecstacy of girlhood's voice

"Just where the brook and river meet."

The Declaration of Independence

HEN in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one set of girls to dissolve the bonds of imprisonment and hard study, which have separated them from the pleasures of the outside world, and to assume among the powers of the earth the distinct and equal privilege of "coming out"—the goal which they and their calculating mothers have watched year after year, a decent respect to the opinions of the student body requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the dissolution.

We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all Seniors are human beings; that we are endowed by our Creator with certain rights and privileges; that among these are life,—that is to say, eating when and what we please; liberty, that is, liberty to promenade about town when it suits our fancy,—liberty to choose as to when, where and with whom to take our daily walks,—and liberty to sleep as long as our drooping lids dictate; and the pursuit of happiness,—such as receiving at least six callers a day,—having midnight feasts, and attending dinner and box parties.

Whenever any form of government becomes destructive to these ends, it is our right and privilege to abolish it, and we here and now, in our Senior year, do abolish all said government, and do institute a new regime for the benefit of the Seniors-to-come, laying its foundation on such principles as we have just named. The class of 1907 has exhibited a wonderful amount of patient sufferance, and it is now necessary to alter the former systems of government. The history of the present rulers of our establishment,—namely, the Faculty, is a history of repeated usurpations.

To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world.

They have, at all times, refused their signatures to petitions for holidays and excursions to the Dudley football field and other such expeditions most wholesome and necessary for our happiness:

They have refused to pass certain laws for the accommodation of the boarding pupils,—for example, laws to prohibit the nightly tramps of the watchman to remind them when to put out their lights, and likewise his day-break journey over the house, cow bell in hand, to rouse each of the said victims from that most restful early morning nap.

They have called together repeatedly a so-called "ninth period class,"—that is, an after-school class where every talkative young lady has an opportunity to make up any time lost during school hours.

They have made our wills submit to theirs always,—and have used their judgment alone concerning the distribution of "S's" and "P's."

They have thrust upon us this mighty privilege (?) of issuing yearly an Annual, equal only to the abilities of statesmen, and have stationed, in times of peace, standing armies,—namely, the Staff, in order to keep revived within us that ever-smouldering fire of interest.

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms; but our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated usurpations.

In such a bondage and under such ruling powers have we existed since September 28, 1906, unto this present date.

We, therefore, the Senior Class of 1907, do, guided by the authority of our most exalted conscience, solemnly publish and declare, on this twenty-eighth day of May in the year of our Lord, 1907, that we are free and independent beings; that we are absolved from all allegiance to Ward Seminary's crown; and that, as free and independent characters, we have the liberty to return at once to our respective homes and enjoy the pursuit of happiness which independent girls may of right do.

And for the support of this declaration, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our love.

"On Being Asked to Write a Senior Poem"

Class poem—that's easy— Just call on the muse, Then tune up our lyre And begin to enthuse.

First trot out the phrases
We've all heard so oft,
And work in the sentiment
Sticky and soft.

Heave a sigh for our school days, Their "companionship sweet;" Mix up "learning's fair paths" And our own "youthful feet."

Palpitate over pleasures
Of class room and hall;
Fondly dwell on "the pictures
Upon memory's wall."

Then a spiel on "ideals,"
"Aspirations" and "dreams;"
Intimate rather strongly
All is not what it seems.

On "life and its meaning"

Come out good and strong;

Be soulful, uplifting—

Don't run on too long.

Now looms "the great future," And of course without fail We will ask what is hidden 'Neath its "mystical veil."

Now pile on our rainbows
And roses and slush,
And close in a climax
Of glory and rush.

A Junior Revery

How sweet to be a Junior,
For we are wise and know
When we were Freshmen, Juniors scorned us,
In the days of long ago.

How sweet to be a Junior,
For to us there comes no scoff,
But then, when we were younger
How they sneered and called us "Soph."

How sweet to be a Junior,
The Seniors love us so;
We're to give them a swell reception
In the springtime, don't you know.

Now we're glad we're Juniors, So winning and so sweet; But we'll not scorn when next year comes To take a Senior's seat.

A Test

The end of the fifth period was coming fast, As through the chapel once there passed A teacher, who showed as plain as day A terrible thing was coming our way— A test!

> Her brows were sad, but her eye beneath Flashed like a falchion from its sheath, And like a silver clarion rung In accents of that unknown tongue— A test!

> > In other rooms we saw the light
> > Of happy faces, undimmed by fright,
> > But for us some awful tortures shone,
> > And from our lips escaped a groan—
> > A test!

"Do try to pass!" the teacher said,
"Dark looms the tempest o'er your heads,
Your marks are awful, @rrible, bad;"
Again that teacher made us sad—
A test!

"Oh wait," one girl said, "let us rest Our weary heads before this test." No pity was in her bright blue eye, And still she said without a sigh— A test!

"Be sure your factors are on one line, Some pupil in this test must shine!" This is our teacher's last advice; Her voice still sounds as from the heights— A test!

Thus in days that are cold and gray, Unsuspecting still we stay; When from the sky, serene and far, This terror comes, like a falling star—A test!

A Sophomore's Midnight Spectre

HAVE just returned from a Hallowe'en party, tired and sleepy. The hands of the clock point to a quarter to twelve. How the wind whistles! How inviting my bed looks; but to-morrow is Sophomore theme day and my theme is unwritten! But I am wasting time, and I must begin immediately. I wonder who invented themes. It must have been some very unkind mortal who wished to exterminate girls.

This announcement met the eyes of the poor Sophomores a week ago: "Sophomore theme: Something in Connection with Hallowe'en." But as usual I have put it off to the eleventh hour, as most girls do. I suppose it would be easiest to write about the Hallowe'en party; so the first thing is to decide upon a title.

What was that mysterious noise? Only the wind. What a coward I am!

"An Exciting Evening" does very well for a title; but as my theme will doubtless be commonplace I had better choose a commonplace title, like "A Hallowe'en Party."

We had such a splendid time at the real Hallowe'en Party—(but isn't this theme-writing a sad postscript?). When we were going upstairs to leave our wraps, ghosts appeared from every direction, and the lights went out. What a race we had for the brightly lighted parlors!

I hear a step outside, a low, low step. My heart nearly stops beating. The door opens just as in ghost stories, without even a knock. "Yes, mother, I am going to bed in a few minutes;" and I return to the theme, eating the apple she brought me.

Where was I? Oh! yes, we had just gone to the parlors. I thought I was nearly through. Well, we played all the Hallowe'en games; then a wizard told us the story, in total darkness, about a dead man whose friend cut off his hand to get a ring from the little finger. When the story had advanced so far I felt something fall into my lap. It was a cold, clammy hand!

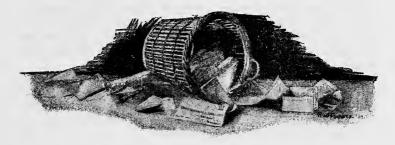

My stars! I feel a hand on my shoulder this very minute. It's a ghost in a white sheet! But Cousin Tom's feet betray him; and after calling him a mean, bad boy, I lock the door after him. But the ghost that I have just rid myself of is more welcome than the task that awaits me, this dreadful theme.

To return to the party and that horrid hand! It thrills me to think of it now. The story having been completed, the most wonderful wizard told our fortunes. (What is that? Only a coal falling from the fire, but how it startled me!) After the party a ghost took each of us home. But how can I ever make a theme of that? Was there ever, ever such a plight? For a Sophomore, a Sophomore who has passed through the humiliations of a Freshman, not to know how, when or where to begin a theme is really distressing. Oh! Freshman, I warn you, as one become familiar with the ways of Ward Seminary, enjoy life while you may! When we were Freshmen, we were all happy; for we were not plagued with methods. For now the next thing to decide is by what method to write the theme. "Contiguity," "Cause and Effect," "Antithesis" or what? But oh! most dreadful of all—this must be remembered: Have the climax at the end. And in this case, how can it be done, when all the party was a climax—of fear! Oh! I can never do it. I know.

Before I begin I will read a little to quiet my nerves. I pick up a book without examining the title. It is about a boy and his mother in a house alone, counting money from a chest, and hearing outside "pit-a-pat, pit-a-pat." The Freshmen will understand I allude to Treasure Island. No, that will never do. Here is a book of poems, which is better. (Was that only the clock?) I open the book, and this is what I find:

"Clasp a rare and radiant maiden
Whom the angels name Lenore,"
Quoth the Raven, "nevermore."

I simply cannot endure this agony any longer; so I am going to bed this very minute, and dream about ghosts, goblins, themes and zeros for Sophomores all night, theme or no theme.

First Impressions of a Freshman

WARD! and a Freshman! My! what fun!
I enter the Charol that a I enter the Chapel that first eventful morning with a feeling of awe, mixed with curiosity. The girls are making such a noise, as only girls can. They are all talking at the same time, and very excitedly. Oh! future students of Ward Seminary, I warn you to take out a life insurance policy before you venture within the Chapel doors on September 28th, for the girls rush wildly about; they are so glad to see their school-mates. I have rather a feeling of loneliness until some girl I have not seen all summer makes a dash for me with a thousand and one questions.

I go up and sit at one of the desks and, full of curiosity, look around the Chapel. Some of the boarders are very lonesome looking. My heart goes out to one especially, who is sitting near me, and crying. I imagine all sorts of things about her in one short moment. But then my thoughts wander to the Faculty; and I try to picture what they will look like. Will they be tall, stern and look forbidding? Will they ever remember that they were once girls, and really enjoyed a bag of salted peanuts behind the teacher's back? Of course they wear glasses; but a terrible thought comes to my mind-will they be of X-ray, so as to see right through a girl?

But see! Miss Jennings appears, she stands before her desk, and taps that bell. All of the voices are hushed, but, perchance, one or two; and they are soon silent as Miss Jennings looks sternly over to their side of the Chapel.

Before I know it the members of the Faculty are actually appearing; the new girls (I among them) look with awe at this stately body. They are not so terrible looking. See! one actually smiles; one is really small! Altogether they look like mortals and not like beings of another world. They do not appear to have the X-ray glasses on either. I suppose they will reserve them for the classroom.

A Mr. ———— gives a long address; but I am so busy thinking about and looking at the Faculty that I don't hear much of it.

After the address, Miss Jennings announces that every girl must be present the next morning promptly at eight. Then she dismisses the school and the first day is over, that day I had thought about so much.

O! Senior students of Ward Seminary, shall I be disappointed with school life here, or will my highest expectations be fulfilled?

Instead of beaux we look to books,
And never think of dress or looks,
True to ourselves and our good teaching
Ever to higher standards reaching.

Ward Seminary for Young Ladies

Locality

HIS Seminary for young ladies was established in the fall of 1906, and since that time its growth has been constant, regular and healthy. The structure of the building and its advantageous location is unequalled. It is situated on one of the most popular car lines in the city, and has the good fortune of being directly opposite to Vanderbilt University. This most desirable location gives to the Ward girls a rare opportunity for meeting the most aristocratic and high-bred young men from all parts of the United States. They are allowed to call on the girls any time between three in the afternoon and twelve at night, no exception being made to week nights.

Social Life

The directors and members of the Faculty advocate all social pleasures, and not only are the girls allowed to receive friends themselves, but they are permitted to accept all invitations. Whenever any Ward girl gets a "bid" to a frat. dance, which is a most frequent occurrence, she is urged to accept the kind hospitality offered her. The girls also enjoy many theater parties, buggy drives and expeditions to the Hippodrome during the scholastic term, and the principal of the school is careful to see that all courtesies are in turn repaid. It is a custom of the school to give an entertainment at least once a week, and to such functions each pupil is allowed to invite no less than five guests. As Wards has one of the best and largest ball rooms in the city, a dance is the favorite entertainment.

Seminary Building

The Seminary building alone, aside from the life enjoyed within, would give it a world-wide reputation. It is one of the handsomest, most convenient and modern buildings in existence. It is a stone structure consisting of eight dormitories, each having every modern convenience. The first floor of the main building comprises a large reception hall, two drawing rooms, three living rooms, a very attractive music room, an unusually large dining room and a well adapted ball room. The second floor of the main building is used exclusively for the study (?) hall (a room 120 x 60, carpeted in Brussels carpet), and the recitation rooms. The Chapel has one of the best stages in Nashville, and not only do the pupils of the school present pleasing little comedies (French and otherwise), but the Vendome and the Bijou often present here their most popular performances.

The Chapel contains five hundred cushioned desks, and to each desk is attached an attractive waste basket in which the girls put all banana peelings and etc. that they wish to dispose of. A place is also provided for all rejected chewing gum.

Work

The school hours are everything but long and tiresome. managers of the school consider it unwise for the girls to be awakened before nine-thirty, and giving them an hour in which to adorn their graceful figures, and an hour to enjoy a good healthy breakfast, they begin school usually at eleven-thirty. An instructor is employed to teach the girls all the bright, catchy songs and hits of the season. and this lesson is given first place in the morning duties. policy of the school is frivolous, easy work. In fact it is highly disapproved of young girls' health being virtually wrecked by late hours of study. The school duties are made pleasures and not bores. No girl is allowed to have more than two studies, and every instructor is careful to detect and highly disapprove of any exertion on the part of the pupil. The school hours are from eleven-thirty to one, with a recess of an hour, during which time a delightful six course luncheon is served. All during the day the young ladies engage in lively conversation—one aim of the institution is to cultivate the art of talking, in order that in after years no pupil of Ward Seminary can be accused of letting conversation drag. After school hours the young ladies are permitted to choose the way in which they are to spend the remainder of the afternoon and evening. Many often spend hours in the library, which contains every magazine and paper. Every copy of Puck and Judge published in the last ten years is at hand, to say nothing of Town Topics. One of the most helpful and elevating series in the library collection is that of Vogue, to which the girls are particularly partial.

Dormitories

The other buildings consist only of the girls' private apartments. Each girl has a suite of rooms consisting of a boudoir, a bed room and a private bath. No room has less than nine electric lights—student lamps are positively prohibited. An individual maid is employed for every student, and is required to respond promptly to all calls of the electric bells or the telephone. The rooms are all elegantly furnished in mahogany or bird's-eye maple as the girl desires. All necessary linen is provided by the school.

It is altogether impossible to give, in so short a space, all the merits of the school, but satisfactory references can be furnished if desired.

Those Little Girls in Blue

Those little girls in blue, lads,
Those little girls in blue;
Some have brothers and there are others
Who own a cousin or two.
But these things do not avail, lads,
They're out of date at Ward's;
You can only view those girls in blue
From the safety distance affords.

Those little girls in blue, lads,

Those little girls in blue,
In uniforms neat, when out on the street,
They're a pretty sight for true.
But when they have first arrived, lads,
I'll tell you what they do;
If you mention "mother" they'll look at each other,
And then they'll all "boo-hoo."

But this stage is soon passed by, lads,

There's many a reason why;

With lessons to learn, and honors to earn,

And good times, they cease to cry;

And they'll tell you in years to come, lads,

That the happiest time of their lives

Was when they were scholars, spending pa's dollars,

Learning to be good little wives.

Only a Dream

YES indeed, why certainly they're to give us a reception. Didn't we give the Seniors one last year?" "Indeed we did, and only finished paying for it this fall."

Two Seniors had their heads very close together, and every other Senior that passed was stopped and asked if she didn't think the Juniors owed the Seniors a reception. All agreed that indeed it would be entirely out of the question for the Juniors not to give a reception, and a very fine one at that, to their departing schoolmates. About twenty Seniors had gathered on the gallery, and it wasn't long before every girl had decided on the dress she was to have on the occasion of the very fine reception which the Juniors were surely going to give them in the spring.

That night a very tired Senior retired at two A. M. after having tried to find the Wordsworthian touch in ten poems, memorizing ten or twelve other poems, and looking up thirty-two men for History of Art, not to mention four maps which she had prepared for her history class.

Suddenly she found herself dressed in a beautiful white dress, with ribbons. After thinking a moment she realized that this was the dress she had planned to wear to the reception. In the same moment she seemed to remember that this was the day for the reception, and she ordered the carriage and was soon on her way.

On arriving she was ushered in by a colored man in a dress suit who pointed the way to the dressing room. Wraps were everywhere, all over the room, and she had some trouble in finding a place for hers. The most beautiful music she had ever heard sounded in her ears, and she was eager to go down, but first she must put some powder on her nose and comb up her hair. Before she was ready to go down, two teachers entered and began taking off their wraps. The one in pink with a large rose in her hair remarked, "Receptions are more pleasant than teaching Physics—that music makes me want to dance—but oh, these French heels I have on!" "Indeed a reception is far more pleasant than teaching music lessons all day. How good it is to hear real music," sighed her companion as she stepped before a long mirror to admire her green silk dress and satin slippers.

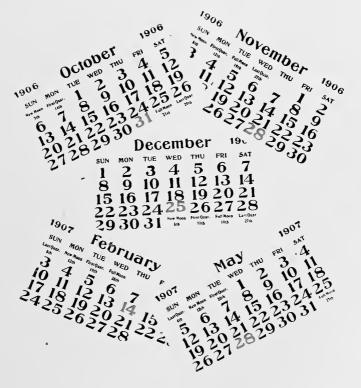

The Senior went slowly down the steps listening to the hum of voices. A tall teacher in a light blue princess dress stood near the door, and the Senior heard her remark, "This hum of voices reminds me of the first period when I am trying to hear my small section of Senior history. The lesson is always very important, and the girls are so inconsiderate. When they will talk I take it as a personal insult-and I sometimes think they mean it as such." The Senior on hearing these words hurried away as quickly as she could, but before she realized where she was, another tall teacher in light blue and pink, seeming to forget herself, called in short, quick accents to a group of girls chatting across the room, "Catch that girls—see what I mean?" "Oh dear," sighed the Senior, "shall we never hear the end of these school expressions," and she slipped away to amuse herself elsewhere. She had hardly gone ten steps before she overheard another conversation. "I hope every member of the Psychology Class will be able to remember well enough to tell the class how each dress here is made." "Such a good opportunity for using those rules for the cultivation of the memory," a tall blonde was saying to a shorter blonde by her side, dressed in yellow, who wasn't paying the slightest attention for she was interested in the filling of a large frappe bowl. "Tra-la-la," she sang in a clear soprano voice, "Come, I think I'll get some frappe." So off they both walked, leaving the Senior alone. She wasn't long alone, however, for soon a little lady, dressed in lavendar, touched her arm, and with a foreign accent said, "I'm glad you have not missed this oppor-tunity for spending a pleasant afternoon. I think it will do you good, my child."

Just then a Junior called them in to refreshments, and they went in to enjoy a bountiful supply of bananas and salted peanuts. The Senior noticed that the tall teacher in the light blue princess helped herself freely to the peanuts, and heard her say, "You know I've just learned to love peanuts in the last week or two. I've had to take so many away from the girls, and I couldn't bear to see them wasted." The Senior laughed convulsively behind her handkerchief

-choked-and-

"What an absurd dream!" she gasped, starting up and rubbing her eyes, then laughingly added, "A dream reception is better than none." A poet there was cleped Chaucer,
The fynest you ever saw, sir;
His spellin' it was poor,
'Twas incorrect for sure,
'Till Roosevelt made it the law, sir.

WITH THE SPORTS.

Coach Starr of Ward Seminary Announces Bright Prospect for Football Year.

Line-Up.

Center	Ross
Right Guard	Dr. Blanton
Left Guard
Right Tackle	Jaccard
Left Tackle	Sheppe
· Quarter-back	Thach
Right Half
Left Half
Fullback	Jennings
Right End	Caldwell
Left End
Water Carrier	Dr. Anderson
Chief Linesman	Miss Goodwin

I am glad to inform the football enthusiasts that the outlook for this year's football team is one of the best we have had for a long time, as there is some very good new material and almost all of the old stars are back again.

Captain Jennings has already inspired her team with the importance of order and self control, and the team is beginning to improve under her careful enforcement of the rules. We are expecting great things from Captain Jennings, with whose wonderful kicking we are all familiar.

The quarter-back, Thach, bids fair to be good on quarter-back runs, and I think she will run the team well, as she "scans" the line with a practiced eye and immediately detects any "irregularity."

In placing the team Green and Scruggs will be put in at right and left halfback, because neither is a whole without the other. The Blantons are back at their old places, right and left guard—always on the watch.

Sheppe and Jaccard will play right and left tackle, because neither was ever known to let anyone pass. Caldwell will be at right end, but I have not decided who is to play left end vet.

Ross, the new center, is a great ground gainer. She has been known to knock out five men at a time, and for endurance and "stickability" is a strong point in the line.

The team practices from 8:33 to 2:15 five days in the week, and in spite of the seeming slaughter of their opponents, few lasting injuries are inflicted. COACH STARR.

The Ward Query Box

بي

(Every effort will be made to answer all questions if received two weeks before "Iris" goes to press.)

"Wanderer"—Is it at all advisable for a young man, fairly good looking, and of an agreeable nature, to pass the windows of Ward Seminary between twelve-forty-five and one-fifteen P. M.?

We advise you to stay clear of such neighborhood at this time, for it is then the inmates of the Seminary indulge in a half hour recess, and every day many innocent young men of Nashville are way-laid in passing the building. They are not only made to smile sweetly, and tip their hats to any unknown creature in recognition of a sweet bow, and a more fatal wink or smile, but lo, it is often hinted to the unfortunate creature, whosoever he may be, to make tracks to Mrs. Tony, only to spend there his hard-earned coin for chocolate creams, zu-zus, etc., and returning deposit them in the outstretched hands of her who is gracefully (?) balanced on the window sill. Oh, young men of such fate—beware, she is fooling thee.

Eleanor Robertson—Would you be so kind as to tell me the cause of the uproar in the Senior Literature Class when I said Hood wrote the "Tale of a Shirt?"

We fear you are hopeless.

A Junior—What is a Psychology lesson?

The Seniors tell us it is an "experience meeting."

Zette—In Literature I am troubled with the so-called malady—insonnia. Can you suggest a remedy?

Try three minutes of pinches from your next door neighbor, taken until relieved.

Trouble—What is to be most avoided in life?

The Iris staff.

Duck—Could you possibly tell all interested ones why Miss Sara FitzGerald Robertson never appears at school on Monday morning?

You show your ignorance by not knowing that the said Miss Robertson hasn't sufficiently recovered from the "Fifty-seven Varieties" of the day before.

The Ward Query Box

عو

Twenty-three—Define the term vegetarian?

The name of Lois Ware is a good definition because it is an established truth she is extraordinarily fond of all "Green" things.

Laura Butler—Did Leonardo da Vinci paint Botticelli's Spring? The Humane Society wishes your address.

Inquisitive—Why did Dr. Blanton remove his mustache? To watch it grow out again.

History of Art Class—Did Giorgione die of a broken heart or of the plague?

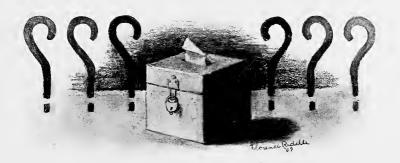

It is generally believed that he died of a broken heart, but was he not then, as poor boys often are, plagued to death?

Slang—What does the expression a "tight wad" mean? The girl who doesn't subscribe for an Iris.

Miss Green—What will one see in Antwerp? A lot of Rubens.

Puzzle—Why was Wards ever established?

"Nobody knows the answer Nobody ever will"—

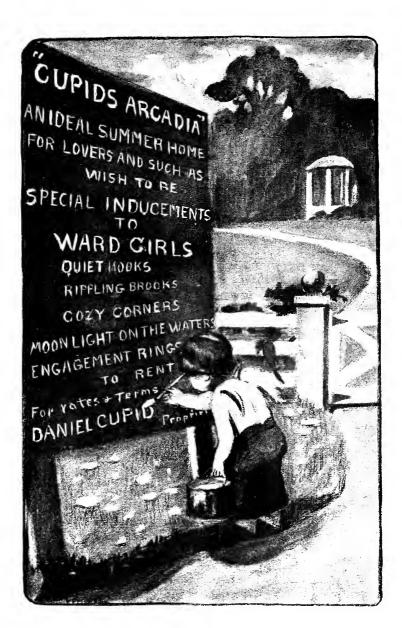

Through this toilsome school, alas, Once, and only once, we pass; If a kindness we may show, If a good deed we may do To our suffering sister friend, Let us do it when we can, Nor delay it, for 'tis plain We'll not pass through this again.

Here's love and good wishes for the class, Gratitude and esteem for the faculty, A cheer for old Ward's, the White and Gold, And a sad farewell to all.

You will Marry

National Steel Range made and guaranteed by Phillips & Buttorff Mfg. Co. Nashville, Tenn.

some day-and when you do, we want the privilege of furnishing your home with the most modern conveniences, with which you can lighten house-work and economize in finance by selecting from P. & B.

Stoves, Ranges, Heaters, Utensils, Mantels and Grates, China, Cut Glass, Cutlery, Etc.

We have furnished thousands of homes since we have been in business, and we believe that for value received, every one of them will recommend us.

We Cordially Invite You

to our Beautiful Art Room-it would be worth coming to see, were there no other attractions. The walls and ceiling of mirrors, the woodwork of polished bird'seye maple. On the shelves are displayed Cut Glass, Vases, Placques, Ivories, etc. But were there no Art Room, would you not wish to see our beautiful display of Haviland, Dresden, Royal Doulton, Poyant, Hohenzollern and other table chinas? We ask that you and your friends pay us a visit-not to buy, but to look.

If teachers will each morning immediately after chapel service, select from the newspaper some article of interest in the world's happenings, and devote ten minutes to a full explanation to the assembled school of its general or special significance, it will be remarked, at the end of the term, that a fund of useful information has been acquired by the pupils. Such a practice will also train them to seek in after life in a newspaper for that which is valuable

A premium will be given for that issue of the Nashville American which does not contain some article of a religious, historical, geographical, literary, or scientific nature, abundantly worthy of such treatment.

HERE is scarcely a day that we do not receive letters from our patrons commending the Starr

HE favorable opinions expressed by thousands of purchasers convince us that the Starr is one of the most desirable pianos of the day.

TO evidence of the merit and overwhelming popularity of the Starr is more conclusive than the endorsement of hundreds of representative people.

TS beauty of design, its perfect, responsive action, its deep, resonant tone quality and remarkable durability have made the Starr a popular favorite.

THE Starr is made in our own factories from start to finish by men whose sole object is to produce the very best instrument possible.

VERY prospective piano purchaser should call and see the Starr, or write us for catalogue and information about our easy terms of selling.
